Reviews

Academic

[Tufts] Classes are very small and everyone is encouraged and expected to participate. Tests occur, but not very important. Writing is a focus. Teachers are always around and many are even willing to give out personal numbers and e-mail addresses. However, some teachers are likable people who are not very good teachers. Work load is definitely heavy. Languages department is not the best.

College Counseling

[Tufts] Maret School begins its formal college counseling Junior year of high school, though everyone is welcomed in the office whenever they want. Many representatives from various colleges visit campus. People can meet with their counselors as much as they want; there are a couple of mandatory meetings. Advisors also teach at least one subject. They don't tell you to apply to specific number or set of schools. Counselors are not very hands-on throughout the application process. Counselors are very well connected.

Admissions Process

[Tufts] Applicants are Pre-K through grade 12.

Extra-Curricular Activities

[Tufts] Most groups meet during break or lunch. There are not many groups to choose from.

Quality of School Life

[Tufts] The facilities are modern and up-to-date, recently renovated. Food has also improved a lot, since there are more options. The neighborhood, in which a large percentage of the student body resides, is the safest (and wealthiest) in Washington, DC. It's a quiet and friendly residential area near the zoo and Cleveland Park. Nearly everyone is from an upper-class background—they are trying to improve diversity.
